National FAU Poll Shows Hispanics Divided Along Party Lines in their Opinions on Economic Outlook and Personal Finances

Trump's Election Appears to Greatly Influence Hispanic Consumers

Boca Raton, Fl., Jan. 31, 2017 /PRNewswire-USNewswire/ -- As the nation approaches the inauguration of Donald J. Trump as the 45th President of the United States this month, Hispanic Republicans are optimistic about their personal finances and the country’s economic outlook, while Hispanic Democrats are feeling the opposite, according to a national survey by the Florida Atlantic University Business and Economics Polling Initiative (FAU BEPi).

The national Hispanic Consumer Sentiment Index dropped in December to 99.6, down slightly from 100.9 in October. Among Hispanic Republicans, however, the index experienced a post election boost, rising more than 20 points from 90.8 in October to 111.8 in December. Conversely, the index plunged among Democrats from 103.6 in the month before the election to 88.4 in December.

"The data shows that Hispanic Republicans are optimistic about their personal finances in the future and the economic outlook of the U.S. with the win of Mr. Trump while Hispanic Democrats are pessimistic," said Monica Eslavares, Ph.D., director of the BEPi. "This gain in consumer confidence among Republican Hispanics from October to December is likely based on their optimism for the policy changes that will take place with the new president. He can expect to enjoy a honeymoon period among Hispanic Republican consumers."

When asked to look ahead a year into the future and consider how they and their family would fare financially, after the election only 19 percent of Hispanic Democrats thought they would be better off, compared to 80 percent in October. Once again, Hispanic Republicans saw things differently post election, with 89 percent saying they would be better off financially a year from now, compared with only 65 percent in October.

Turning to business conditions as a whole, 70 percent of Hispanic Republicans think the next 12 months will bring the country financially good times, up 12 points since October. Only 38 percent of Hispanic Democrats expect economic good times in the coming year, down 10 points from before the presidential election.

The survey was conducted nationally from Dec. 1 through Dec. 31. The polling sample consisted of 500 Hispanics with a margin of error of +/- 4.33 percent and a 95 percent confidence level.

For more information, visit www.business.fau.edu/epi.

SOURCE FAU Business and Economics Polling Initiative