Donald Trump would be Joe Biden in Florida in 2020, poll shows. But Trump would beat other Democrats.

By Web Staff

Published: May 21, 2020

Donald Trump would beat Joe Biden in Florida in 2020, poll shows. But Trump would beat other Democrats.

The poll, conducted by the University of Miami's School of Public Administration, was conducted online among 1,004 registered voters in Florida. The survey was conducted May 14-17, and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.

The poll found that Trump would beat Biden by 46% to 44%, a statistical tie. Trump would also beat other Democratic candidates, including Bernie Sanders, Elizabeth Warren, and Amy Klobuchar, by 10% or more.

The survey was conducted by the University of Miami's School of Public Administration.

The survey was conducted online among 1,004 registered voters in Florida. The survey was conducted May 14-17, and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.

The survey was conducted online among 1,004 registered voters in Florida. The survey was conducted May 14-17, and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.

The survey was conducted online among 1,004 registered voters in Florida. The survey was conducted May 14-17, and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.

The survey was conducted online among 1,004 registered voters in Florida. The survey was conducted May 14-17, and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.

The survey was conducted online among 1,004 registered voters in Florida. The survey was conducted May 14-17, and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.

The survey was conducted online among 1,004 registered voters in Florida. The survey was conducted May 14-17, and has a margin of error of 3.1 percentage points.