

Trump and Biden tied in poll of key swing state

by Zachary Halaschak | May 22, 2019 05:32 PM

Sign up for News from Washington Examiner

Email Address

SUBMIT

A new poll out of a major swing state shows that President Trump and former Vice President Joe Biden are tied in a theoretical matchup.

The Florida Atlantic University poll released Wednesday asked registered voters in Florida who they would support in matchups between Trump and five of the major Democratic candidates. Trump won against every challenger except for Biden, where the two received 50% support.

When Trump was pitted against Sen. Bernie Sanders of Vermont, he won with 51% of the vote. The president beat out Sens. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts and Kamala Harris of California with 52% and 53% of those surveyed, respectively. In a matchup against South Bend, Ind., Mayor Pete Buttigieg, Trump won 52% support.

Editorial Director Hugo Gurdon on the expanded Washington Examiner magazine

Watch Full Screen to Skip Ads

During the 2016 presidential election Trump won Florida and its 29 electoral votes by a 1.2% margin.

The poll also showed that the former vice president has a considerable lead for his party's nomination, with 39% of Democrats supporting Biden in the now 23-person race. Warren and Sanders are tied for second, with 12% support each among Florida Democrats.

Nationally, Biden is also head-and-shoulders above the other Democratic candidates. A RealClearPolitics national average of polls has Biden at 37.6% support.

News Florida Campaigns 2020 Elections Donald Trump Joe Biden Polls

Share your thoughts with friends.

More Washington Examiner

Illinois Gov. J.B. Pritzker signs bill declaring abortion a 'fundamental right'

Subscribe Now to the Digital Edition

'Beautiful' Trump tariffs drag CEO confidence down for third straight time

Maddow: Trump embodied 'all of the worst stereotypes' of Americans during European trip

Trump asserts executive privilege over material sought in census 2020 citizenship decision

Beto on whether he'd vote for de Blasio: 'Probably not'

Electric co-ops seek fact-driven, flexible coal ash regulation

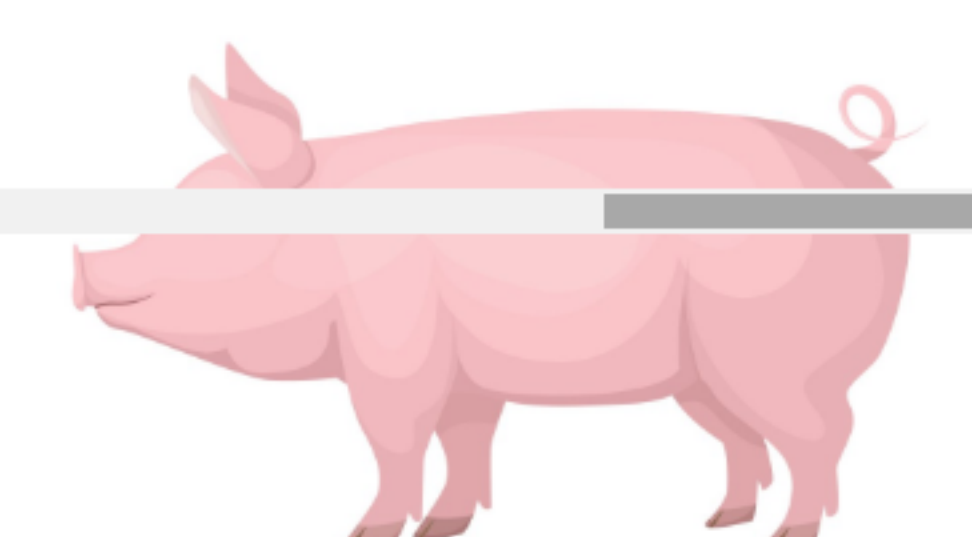

British prime minister candidate adopts Hillary Clinton's losing election slogan

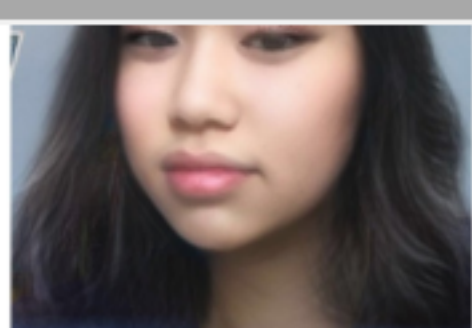

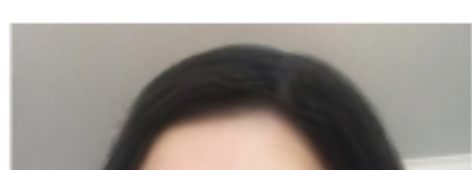

Democrat reads letter calling Trump supporters 'racist' and 'dumb' on the House floor

Kamala Harris: DOJ 'would have no choice' but to prosecute Trump after White House

Costly 'earmarks' reach $15B, largest since pork ban imposed

Gender-bending Snapchat feature leads to arrest of California cop

White House denies Rep. Steve King a seat on Air Force One

'Delay means defeat': Trump ally Boris Johnson launches campaign for British premier with Brexit appeal

'Landslide proportions': New poll shows Biden crushing Trump

Infowars to pay Pepe the Frog creator in copyright settlement