The chance of President Donald Trump for a presidential re-election bid in 2020 becomes thinner as he struggles to get the votes of Hispanics in Florida based on a recent survey conducted by the Florida Atlantic University’s Business and Economics polling Initiative (FAU BPI). This means that the creation of the Latinos for Trump and other coalitions did not help much in his campaign for 2020 elections.

In an article published in Latin Times, the following data gathered in the survey conducted indicated a match-up between Hispanic voters in Florida:

- 87 percent disapproved of his performance, 71 percent approved, and 22 percent are still undecided.
- 56 percent of the Puerto Ricans disapproved of his performance, while 51 percent gave an approval rating.
- Hispanics are split with 45 percent disapproved and 55 percent approve rate.
- Cubans gave somehow a brighter side to Trump, 47 percent approved his performance and only 28 percent said they are not satisfied.

This means that overall, the Hispanics are showing unfavorable support for Trump’s 2020 presidential re-election bid. The survey poll also looked into the pulse of the Hispanics for the leading presidential Democratic candidates in a match-up against Trump.

HERE IS THE RESULT OF THE MATCH-UP OF DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES AGAINST TRUMP IN A FUNDRAISING EVENT HAPPENS TODAY (PUBLISHED IN HERALD TRIBUNE):

- Former Vice President Joe Biden is the strongest contender of Trump among the Hispanics who garnered 67.7 percent while Trump gained 32.3 percent.
- Senator Elizabeth Warren got 64.9 percent against Trump’s 31.1 percent. She almost matched Joe Biden as he number one contender.
- Senator Bernie Sanders who got 61.2 percent against Trump’s 38.7 percent.

The data presented by the FAU BPI shows the weak side of Trump and the Republicans. It was found that Democrats showed dominance in the recent suburban elections in a different county. The FAU BPI likewise said that two of the factors that affect the popularity of Trump towards Hispanics is the new immigration policy and the increased number of border killings.

The following are the main concerns or most important issues of the Hispanics based on the survey:

- Both economy and healthcare ranked number 1 that garnered 20 percent.
- Education gained 19 percent.
- Immigration at 20 percent.
- Social issues and environment both gained 8 percent.

In connection to the first issue of Hispanic, the previous article from the Latin Post shows the best cities in America for the immigrants that were ranked based on a study conducted and Chicago ranked number 1. However, like many other cities in America, Chicago failed to give equal economic opportunities to immigrants more specifically to Hispanics.

In terms of the perceptions of the Hispanics about the impeachment inquiry, Hispanics also shared their opinion. Here is the reported data:

- 50 percent of Hispanics said that they approved the impeachment inquiry.
- 29 percent disapprove.
- 21 percent not sure.

It is very important for Trump to get the major votes of Hispanics because they are the largest minority group in the country with an estimated 32 million eligible votes. The Hispanic community is followed by the black community who are composed of an estimated 30 million eligible votes.
